Communities unite to fight wildfires across four counties

Dozens of fire companies and hundreds of local volunteers banded together last week to fight multiple wildfires that rapidly spread across a reported 4,000 acres of land in the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia and across Virginia.

Prior to the fires being reported, the region was hit by a severe wind storm, with some Grant County residents reporting winds that exceeded 96 mph, scattering trees across roadways and overturning large vehicles.

The high winds even took the local radio station, WELD-FM and WQWV-FM, off-air on Wednesday night.

“We have a little tower that sends a signal to the big tower and she blew over,” said WELD DJ Chip Combs in an interview with Chris Lawrence of Metro News. “The winds were 50, 60, to 70 miles an hour and blew it down.”

Even though the station’s two FM channels were off, the station continued to broadcast on their AM690 and all three stations were streaming online.

Power outages also affected the station but it was back on the air the next day.

While the exact causes of the fires are not yet known, the rapid spreading of the blaze has been attributed to extreme winds and low humidity.

While the fires heavily impacted Hardy, Hampshire and Pendleton counties as well, the main fire located in Grant County began in the early afternoon of March 20, when the Petersburg Volunteer Fire Company was alerted for a brush fire at the Spring Run Fish Hatchery.

“Engine Rescue 400 immediately responded with a crew of four due to our brush truck being on a call in Hardy County prior to arrival,” explained PVFC

New rec center receives county funding

The Grant County Commission recently approved $150,000 in funding towards a community recreation and sports center that has been proposed in Petersburg.

The funding approval came during the March 12 meeting of the Grant County Commission when the commissioners met with project leaders Jeremy Rigglesman and Tyler Kuhn. Rigglesman and Kuhn are the community members who initially proposed the project to county and city leadership earlier this year.

The two provided an update on the project, including that they had reached out to state delegates and officials to request funding and grant assistance, have applied for their 501c3 nonprofit status and have received support for the project from the Petersburg City Council.

Rigglesman and Kuhn then requested that the commission allot the county funds already earmarked for a community center project to the nonprofit once its status receives

Spring Mountain Festival pageant crowns queen

This past weekend, the annual Spring Mountain Festival pageant crowned Alaisa Martinez Toro as the 2024 festival queen.

The annual festival pageant is hosted by the Grant County Chamber of Commerce and held at the Landes Arts Center.

“The Spring Mountain Festival Pageant committee sends our thanks to all the ladies, young and younger, for being in our pageant, and to their families that supported them and the community who turned out to see a great pageant,” the host announced on social media following the pageant.

The Spring Mountain Festival will be held in the Petersburg City Park on April 26-28.

BOGAL FLAVOR

By Camille Howard
“Hippity, hoppity, Easter’s on its way!” Do you remember that little song about Peter Cottontail? Some things that we don’t need to remember seem to be lodged in our brains and will never leave, such as songs we learned when we were kids.

Not only do I remember the words to “Here Comes Peter Cottontail,” I also remember Christmas kid songs, Mother Goose songs like “Jack and Jill”, a variety of Sunday school and camp songs, and jingles from television commercials.

The Oscar Mayer wiener song comes to mind and, of all things, the Winston cigarette song!

My sister and I also know some weird songs like “Sarasponda” and “Chickery Chick” - a song from the 1940s. Then there’s “Kumala Vista” or maybe the real title is “Flee Fly Flo”, I’m not sure.

I really need to remember where I left my coffee cup or my phone, but instead my brain is clogged up with silly songs.

And after typing those last two words, I now remember the Veggie Tales cartoon segment, Silly Songs with Larry, and “Oh Where is My Hairbrush?”

Really, having silly songs pop into my head at odd times is probably good for my sanity (as long as I don’t sing them out loud in public).

So, back to Easter ... I’m planning on having Easter dinner for 20 this year, which could be interesting since our house is pretty small. Last year we started out at the kitchen table and extending two more tables into the living room.

I’m hoping for good weather so we can spend time outside on Saturday and have our annual egg hunt for the kids.

Early Sunday morning we’ll all be at church for sunrise service, enjoy breakfast together, then morning worship. I’ll have to say I like having a pew or two packed with family, and we’ve got some good singers in the group so the harmony adds so much to the songs of praise.

Every year some of us try our hand at Easter and spring food, such as bunny cupcakes or ones decorated with colored coconut and jelly beans in the middle. One year I dyed the white halves of the deviled eggs in pastel colors and this year I found another egg-shaped treat.

It’s for Jell-O eggs and the recipe is to make several different colors of Jell-O (using the Jigglers recipe) and pour them into deviled egg holder slots. It’s an easy dessert and you can make it with sugar free Jell-O, also.

Erin and I are making little bunny pretzel melts for a snack and I’ll be making pies; pecan as usual and I think a custard pie would be good.

My brother once called me to get my pecan pie recipe, so I said “Go to the grocery store, pick up a bottle of Karo light corn syrup, and look on the label. That’s it.” So much for a secret recipe!

I hope each of you has a wonderful week and a blessed Easter!

Grant Memorial Hospital AVP receives DAISY Nurse Leader Award

Elaine Geroski, RN, MSN, CNOR, CSSM (E), assistant vice president of patient services at WVU Medicine Grant Memorial Hospital, received the DAISY Nurse Leader Award, which was presented to her at the recent Association of Perioperative Nurses (AORN) conference in Nashville, Tenn.

The DAISY Nurse Leader Award was created to shine a light on those who do not typically have direct patient care as part of their work and those who create an environment where compassionate, skillful care thrives.

The award recognizes nurse managers, directors, assistant managers, charge nurses, chief nursing officers, informatics nurses, and patient flow nurses.

"This award is well-deserved," Melanie Heuston, DNP, RN, NEA-BC, Elaine Geroski is shown receiving the DAISY Nurse Leader Award from Arthur Shapiro, AORN member and secretary/treasurer of CCI.

chief nursing executive for the WVU Health System, said. "I'm so proud of our nurse leaders, like Elaine, who go out of their way to create an environment where attributes, such as trust, compassion, respect, professional development, innovation, collaboration, and ethical behavior, are modeled and supported."

The DAISY Foundation was established in 1999 by members of the family of J. Patrick Barnes, who wanted to do something positive to honor their son after he died from complications of an autoimmune disease in 1999.

They came up with DAISY (Diseases Attacking the Immune System), an international recognition program that honors and celebrates nurses.

Geroski was also recognized at the conference for her outstanding service as the board president of the Competency and Credentialing Institute (CCI), the credentialing body for perioperative nurses, for the past three years. During her term, which ended in 2023, CCI added three new credentials for a total of five.

Your chance to pay back our volunteer fire companies

We can't say enough about our Grant County volunteer fire companies and their "above and beyond the call of duty" mindset that kept them wrangling ever-spreading fires that started here last Wednesday. Day and night they were on scene as the fires jumped across the forest, mostly in the Spring Run area of Dorcas. Their voices across the scanner here in the office didn't tell the true story of the team effort made against the growing fires as they coordinated with Grant Com between fire companies as well as other volunteers.

The winds were wicked and the sometimes freezing night temps added to the difficulty of the fight, which turned into a community firefighting effort, not only here but in the surrounding counties.

Construction and excavating companies volunteered their heavy equipment, others hauled water, showed up with other needed equipment, and donated an amazing amount of food and drinks. Law enforcement and EMS were on hand to lend aid.

If you were on any social media accounts, you saw the pictures and the many thanks and prayers that have been offered on behalf of those on scene.

All those days and nights of continual usage of equipment have taken their toll. Just last month, all companies were present at the fire that consumed two buildings on Virginia Avenue, keeping the fire from spreading down the street.

The majority of you support our local volunteer fire companies - Petersburg, Maysville, Mount Storm and Bayard - through donations, purchasing bash tickets and attending fundraisers. That support enables them to keep going.

However, sometimes it's just not enough when it comes to financing the trucks and mandatory gear each company needs, plus other expenses it takes to maintain a firehouse and protect their members.

If you want to do something huge for our Grant County volunteer fire companies, you will have an opportunity in November.

There's no cost, just a moment of your time. The time it takes to vote for the fire levy. A push of a button or a mark on a ballot is all that's required to make a big difference in the service all four provide to this county.

None stand alone. They all must work together; back each other up. It's the only way to cover such a large area and all the property therein.

If you have never participated in an election, this is the time to make it happen. You must be registered to vote to put additional weight behind your contributions and thank-yous.

Do not let the words "my vote doesn't matter" enter your mind or roll off your tongue. In a county with a small population, local elections and levies matter down to the very last vote.

For those of you who have not registered, you can go to the Grant County Clerk's office in the courthouse and ask to be registered. It's painless.

If your schedule doesn't allow you to visit the clerk's office during regular business hours visit GoVoteWV.com. It's easy to do on your phone, tablet or computer.

You can also update your address or status, or check your voting precinct there.

The generosity of Grant County residents is one thing that makes this county a great place to live. Extend that generosity with your vote for the fire levy.

Where would we be if our volunteer fire companies didn't exist? If last week is any indication ... in ashes.

The idea, in a nutshell, is to "reduce partisan animosity and foster healthy debate by modeling a more positive and optimistic way of working through policy problems," as the NGA puts it.

It would be easy to scoff, of course. In this era of bitter political hostility, as we head into a presidential election that is likely to prove even more negative and divisive than the last one, talk of reducing animosity and boosting healthy and constructive debate seems like a nice dream that's got no chance of becoming reality.

Disagree Better. That's the name of an interesting initiative at the National Governors Association this year, spearheaded by the organization's current chair, Utah Republican Gov. Spencer Cox.

The idea, in a nutshell, is to "reduce partisan animosity and foster healthy debate by modeling a more positive and optimistic way of working through policy problems," as the NGA puts it.

It would be easy to scoff, of course. In this era of bitter political hostility, as we head into a presidential election that is likely to prove even more negative and divisive than the last one, talk of reducing animosity and boosting healthy and constructive debate seems like a nice dream that's got no chance of becoming reality.

But the thing about governors is that most are not dreamers. They're confronted every day by the nuts and bolts of making their states work. Unlike, say, Congress, they have no choice but to tackle the issues challenging their residents, towns, cities, and counties. Or as Cox put it not long ago, "Potholes aren't partisan."

Which means governors are also in a position to make a difference. As the NGA writes on its page about Cox's effort, "We need to learn to disagree in a way that allows us to find solutions and solve problems instead of endlessly bickering. An 'exhausted majority' of Americans want this, and the science is clear about interventions that reduce polarization. As doers and builders, governors are in a unique position to model what healthy conflict looks like."

And, in fact, there do seem to be "interventions" that reduce polarization. One example comes from Cox himself. In the 2020 gubernatorial election, as he sought to move up from the lieutenant governorship, he and his Democratic opponent, law professor Christopher Peterson, cut an ad together in which they pledged to abide by the election results. "Win or lose, in Utah, we work together," Peterson said in the ad.

It was a nice, hopeful touch, but it was also more than that. That agreement between the two candidates was one of several dozen approaches noted in a Stanford University megastudy (basically, a study of studies) aimed at finding practical, real-world strategies for reducing polarization that might lead to violence.

Highlighting "endorsements of democratic principles by political elites," the study found—with the Cox-Peterson example front and center—was one of the most effective strategies for reducing public support for undemocratic practices.

So were correcting exaggerated stereotypes of supporters of the other

Everyone can play a part in supporting families in their communities

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month and MountainHeart Community Services Inc. encourages all individuals and organizations to play a role in making every community a better place for children and families.

By ensuring that parents have the knowledge, skills, and resources that they need to care for their children, you can help prevent child abuse and neglect by creating strong and thriving children, youth, and families in your communities.

Research shows that protective factors are present in healthy families. Protective factors are conditions or attributes of individuals, families, communities, or the large society that reduce risk and promote healthy development and wellbeing.

Promoting the following protective factors is one of the most effective ways to reduce the risk of child abuse and neglect:

- Nurturing and attachment
- Knowledge of parenting skills and child/youth development
- Social connections
- Concrete support for parents
- Social and emotional competence of children

April is a time to celebrate the important role the communities play in protecting children and strengthening families.

Peggy Rittenhouse, community resource and outreach specialist, stated "Everyone's participation is critical. Focusing on ways to connect with families is the best things our community can do to strengthen families and prevent child abuse and neglect."

In support of these efforts, the Children's Bureau, within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, in collaboration with its information service, the Child Welfare Information Gateway, the Office of Child Abuse and Neglect, the FRIENDS National Center for Community-Based Child Abuse Prevention, and over 30 national prevention partners, has created the Prevention Resource Guide: Strong and Thriving Families, Prevention with a Purpose. The resource guide, designed for service providers who work throughout the community to support families is available online at:

West Virginia Sen. Capito unsure why Manchin has moved to block judicial picks

By Charles Young
WV News

Sen. Shelley Moore Capito, R-W.Va., said she doesn't know why her fellow West Virginia senator has decided to block President Joe Biden's judicial nominees.

Sen. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va., as first reported by Politico, has announced plans to vote against any of the president's judicial picks if the candidate does not have support from a Republican.

"Just one Republican. That's all I'm asking for. Give me something bipartisan. This is my own little filibuster. If they can't get one Republican, I vote for none. I've told (Democrats) that. I said, 'I'm sick and tired of it. I can't take it anymore,'" Manchin said in an interview Wednesday.

Capito, speaking during her weekly press briefing Thursday, said she was unsure of Manchin's motivations.

"I can't explain, all of a sudden, why he's decided to vote against these," she said. "Because I think he's voted for some in the past.

She had voted against the president's nominees because she feels they lack the necessary qualifications, Capito said.

"A lot of the nominees that the president has put forward for our courts — and we know they are lifetime appointments — are very unqualified," she said. "And they are checking boxes of a liberal agenda, so there's going to be no Republican support for many of these."

Also last Thursday, Capito discussed the $1.2 trillion spending package congressional lawmakers had to pass before Friday to avert a government shutdown.

"We are going to be voting here in the next several days to fund our government — again, finally," she said.

The package consists of six separate spending bills, Capito said.

"I believe they will pass," she said. "It is more spending on defense, but overall less spending."

She was able to secure several West Virginia-specific priorities in the package, Capito said.

"(Like) trying to help Charleston Area Medical Center stand up a new neurosciences institute with Marshall, and also getting some help with their cybersecurity, an important new area of emphasis at Marshall," she said. "I'm very pleased."

Lawmakers needed to pass the package before 12:01 a.m. on Saturday to avoid a shutdown.

Highlands Bankshares Inc. announces year end 2023 results

Highlands Bankshares, Inc., the parent company of The Grant County Bank and Capon Valley Bank, posted year ended 2023 earnings of $3,557,000 or $2.26 per share of common stock outstanding (EPS), compared to $4,427,000 or $3.31 EPS for the same period of 2022.

On Feb. 13, the board of directors declared a quarterly dividend to shareholders of $0.42 per share. The dividend was payable to all shareholders of record as of Feb. 26, and was paid on or about March 1.

Based upon the current market price and annualizing the dividends paid to shareholders this quarter, Highlands' current dividend yield is 4.48%.

Return on average assets (ROAA) decreased in 2023 to 0.65%, as compared to 0.84% in the same period of 2022. The return on average equity (ROAE) decreased to 6.41% at December 31, 2023, as compared to 8.05% at Dec. 31, 2022.

Total assets, as of Dec. 31, 2023, increased $20,741,000 to $548,163,000 compared to

Dec. 31, 2022. Total liabilities increased $20,246,000 as of Dec. 31, 2023 to $492,645,000 compared to Dec. 31, 2022 as a result of deposit growth.

Shareholders' equity at Dec. 31, 2023 was $55,518,000 or $41.53 per outstanding share, compared to Dec. 31, 2022 of $55,023,000 or $41.16 per outstanding share.

party — basically, providing hard evidence that people's worst fears about people on the other side of the partisan fence were unfounded—and showing them graphic evidence (including the storming of the US Capitol on Jan. 6) of the violence that can happen when democratic norms collapse.

There is good evidence that on the whole, Americans are closer together than we often think we are, even on some hot-button issues—and that some political leaders exaggerate division and play on our fears for political gain. The challenge, of course, is how to lower the temperature to the point where we can hear, and even sympathize with, one another.

Utah's Cox isn't the only governor who's cut an ad trying to advance that cause. Maryland's Democratic governor, Wes Moore, recently made one with Jack Coburn, the Republican mayor of Lonaconing, a small town in western Maryland not far from the West Virginia line. "We can have our differences without being divisive or hateful," Moore says, to which Coburn responds, "We can listen to the other side, ask questions, have important conversations." The point, they go on, isn't that differences don't matter, but that, as Coburn says, "We're just saying there's a better way to disagree." "And who knows," Moore adds. "In the end we might not be as far apart as we thought."

Now, I don't know how much impact an ad like that can have on its own. But imagine what would happen if politicians all across the US reached across the partisan divide and agreed that on this one thing, at least—bringing America back to its old habit of finding common ground—they can agree. That would be political leadership worth pursuing.

Potomac Valley Conservation District local work group meeting scheduled for April 18

The Potomac Valley Conservation District in cooperation with USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) will hold a local work group meeting to discuss conservation programs and provide guidance for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP).

The meeting will be held Thursday, April 18 at 10 a.m. at the Farm Credit Building, 550 South Main Street, Moorefield.

The local work group includes representatives from cooperating federal, state, and local conservation organizations and is open to all farmers, agricultural producers, and forest owners/managers.

If you have thought about applying for one of the programs NRCS has to offer or have questions about what might be available to you, this meeting is an opportunity for you to learn more.

As part of NRCS's locally led process of administering programs, public comments will be sought from attendees on how to best prioritize USDA dollars for your local area.

The PVCD covers Grant, Hardy, Pendleton, Mineral and Hampshire counties. NRCS District Conservationist, Sarah Taylor-Goldizen and staff work from the field offices in Petersburg, Moorefield, and Franklin and District Conservationist, Lee Haggerty and staff work in Keyser and Romney field offices.

If you need an accommodation to participate in this event, contact Nan Kimble at 304-284-7546, or at NRCS.WVStateOffice@usda.gov.

For more information contact Taylor-Goldizen at 304-703-8624 or Haggerty at 304-822-3020 ext. 101.

Compensation to exonerated people nearly doubled in five years

By Nadia Ramlagan, West Virginia News Service
People wrongfully convicted of crimes in the United States have received around $2.2 billion in compensation claims since 2019.

A new report by the National Registry of Exonerations said the amount nearly doubled in just five years.

Barbara O'Brien, editor of the registry, explained even if states saw fewer or no exonerations, it does not necessarily mean there are fewer wrongfully convicted people behind bars. She noted people in prison may not have access to the resources needed to prove their innocence.

"Since 1989, West Virginia's had 14 exonerations," O'Brien reported. "I always caution people not to read too much into the number of exonerations as some sort of indicator of how the systems are working."

Official misconduct is the reason for wrongful convictions in at least 77% of exoneration cases. West Virginia has a two-year time limit for filing compensation claims.

According to The Innocence Project, in 2020, the state changed the law to remove a clause requiring another person to be convicted of the same crime in order for the exonerated person to qualify for compensation.

Other factors leading to exonerations include perjury or false accusations, false or misleading forensic evidence, false confessions and mistaken witness identification. O'Brien pointed out it is not just taxpayers who end up footing the bill for bloated prisons and exoneration payments.

"Incarcerating people costs a lot of money," O'Brien outlined. "If we're incarcerating the wrong people, that's costing the taxpayers. And if it's a case where there is a real perpetrator out there who they didn't catch, they're committing more crimes."

She added cost cannot make up for lost time innocent people have spent behind bars. The report said exonerated individuals in 2023 lost more than 2,000 years collectively for crimes they did not commit, an average of around 15 years per person wrongfully imprisoned. Nearly 84% of exonerees last year were persons of color, and 61% were Black.

THE CITY OF PETERSBURG PUBLIC NOTICE ZONING REQUEST

Highland Park Rentals LLC, the property owner at 6 Highland Ave, requests two variances for this property, which is currently zoned C-3. The Variances are for an addition to the existing laundry mat building. The addition would require a reduced property line setback distance and a decrease in the number of parking spaces.

This will be described in more detail at the hearing.

Any objections to this request must be submitted in writing to the City of Petersburg, 21 Mountain View St., Petersburg, WV 26847 by COB on 04/02/24.

Hearing: April 3, 2024 at 6:30 p.m.

The Zoning Board Hearing will be held at City Hall in the Council Chambers.

Deputy Chief H. Whetzel in a community press release. “Heavy smoke was noted and additional resources were alerted.”

When the PVFC arrived on the scene, Whetzel assumed command of the scene and confirmed a working brush fire that was approximately 20 to 30 acres in size and was spreading rapidly. However, the firefighters struggle to gain access to the scene was initially due to a downed power line. Once on scene, Whetzel explained that the firefighters began a quick attack in order to prevent the loss of any structures, including homes.

“Due to significant wind, the fire continued to spread rapidly,” Whetzel said. “Due to steep and unsafe terrain, members were unable to perform much ground work. Working along with West Virginia Department of Forestry we determined the best option was to allow the forestry to burn and protect any structures.

On Wednesday night, the responders were able to partially establish dozer lines that stopped the fire’s spread and crews remained on scene overnight to protect any structures in the area. Throughout the following day, March 21, the crews were able to keep the fire contained as they worked throughout the day covering fire lines and continuing to keep a careful eye on any nearby structures.

On March 21, Gov. Jim Justice declared a state of emergency for Hardy, Grant, Hampshire and Pendleton counties due to “extensive forest fires.” This declaration is a proactive measure ensuring the allocation of necessary resources and expedite emergency response efforts. The state of emergency allows state and local agencies to take swift and decisive actions to mitigate the impact of the fires and protect the lives and property of West Virginians in those areas. This would have an important impact in Hardy County, when the following day the West Virginia National Guard joined in battling the wildfires raging across the Wardensville area with two Blackhawk helicopters which flew into the Grant County Airport, equipped with 630 gallon buckets used to drop water onto key fire points.

The next day, March 22, the Grant County fire managed to breach a section of the established dozer line but was able to the contained again at only between one to two acres of spread.

“The goal of allowing the fire to burn through forest and to roads is to allow it to be controlled and not take the risk of members being in the woods in unsafe terrain,” Whetzel said. “Once the forestry is burnt it typically burns itself out and won’t reignite, preventing further fire.”

An estimated 1,000 acres of land was burned in Grant County, with even more in Hardy County and additional land burning in Hampshire and Pendleton counties.

On Wednesday, one home, belonging to Brandi and Kurtis Braithwaite of Cabins, was reported to have been lost due to an unrelated house fire with several more homes reported to have been lost in Hardy County to the wildfires.

As of March 23, the PVFC has reported that the fire has been 100% contained but is currently being monitored by the West Virginia Department of Forestry.

“There are still some smoldering spots, so you will still see smoke and possibly some flame throughout the next week or so,” Whetzel advised. “As long as it’s interior it’s safe. If you notice flames close to a structure don’t hesitate to contact 911.”

All of the county’s local responders, PVFC, Maysville Volunteer Fire Company, Mount Storm Volunteer Fire Company, Bayard Volunteer Fire Department, the Grant County Sheriff’s Department and Grant County Ambulance responded to the fire, as well as Elk District VFC, Thomas VFC, Parsons Volunteer Fire Department, Fort Ashby VFC, Romney Fire Company, Valley VFD, Huttsville VFC, Brookhaven VFC, Star City VFC New Creek Volunteer Fire Department, Burlington VFD, Capon Bridge Volunteer Fire Department, Elkins FD, Whitmer VFD, Beverly VFD, Davis VFD, Harman VFD, Mill Creek VFD, Barton VFD, Kitzmiller VFD, Deer Park VFD, Canaan Valley VFD and the West Virginia Department of Forestry.

The WELD-FM and WQWV-FM tower that was blown down during the recent wind storms. Without the tower, the station went temporarily offline on Wednesday night. Despite the loss of the tower, which is necessary for the station’s signal, the station continued to broadcast on their AM690 and streamed all three stations online.

“The key to success was great communication and working very well alongside our WV Foresters,” Whetzel said. “Huge thanks to Billy Whetzel, Chris Whetzel, and ALL Construction for providing dozers. A huge thanks to M&M Trucking for providing us with fuel. We were very well taken care of by the Spring Run Fish Hatchery. Grant County OEM and 911 did an amazing job getting us the resources we needed and made sure we were in need of nothing.”

Whetzel also thanked the community, who responded resoundingly to the call for aid. In both Grant and Hardy counties, businesses, churches, community members and citizen volunteers did everything from giving food to feed the firefighters, to in Hardy County, volunteers taking to the burning woods themselves when called on to help slow the fire’s spread towards homes using rakes and leaf blowers.

“Now to our very gracious and caring community and businesses. There are literally too many to name individually, but please know that words will never be able to describe how appreciated you are. We can’t do what we do without you. We are also gracious for the many calls from state and local government, churches, etc. God bless each of you, God bless Grant County, and God bless the great state of West Virginia.”

approval. In total, the commission set aside approximately $136,700 for a community center project from the American Rescue Plan (ARP) funds they received during the Covid-19 pandemic.

“When I was first elected, one of the things I really felt strongly about was supporting a community center project as well as creating deterrents for drug and alcohol use and abuse, especially among youth,” said commissioner Kevin Hagerty. “And I am fairly certain my fellow commissioners feel the same. This project has the capability to be a ‘two birds with one stone’ situation. I definitely support this project and it means a lot to me as well.”

Kuhn estimated that the facility would cost approximately $400,000, however, clarified that this estimate is very dependent on the funds available and that additional monies would allow for more to be offered.

Rigglesman also expressed hope that the center could eventually tie into the upcoming Petersburg Hike and Bike Trail that will encircle the city.

Bob McCauley, one of the key project leaders heading up the Hike and Bike Trail project, voiced his support for this effort. McCauley even expressed hope that, if the trail receives the expected $600,000 in funds to complete the project, some of those funds could aid in connecting the two.

“We are hoping we may be able to use some of that to run the trail down to the center and maybe do other things in connection to the community center,” McCauley said.

A representative from U.S. Senator Shelly Moore-Capito’s office also spoke on this possibility, saying that it can be difficult to adjust the scope of projects once it has been awarded funds, as is the case with the $600,000 set to be awarded for the hike and bike trail. However, she did say that since the change was minor, it could potentially be possible and that she would speak with the grant program leaders to find out.

“The exact cost is still up in the air, but our baseline or minimum to do it right, will be in the $350,000 to $400,000 range for the full project,” Kuhn said.

Rigglesman said the goal was to primarily work with local contractors and businesses to reduce costs.

“We are hoping to make this a community project,” Rigglesman said. “We want to meet with our local contractors who work in this area and really strive to get everyone on board and involved. I am talking from the building supplies, seeing if we can work with local distributors to get them at cost to, same with the concrete. I also own some equipment and is available for free. I really want this to be a community effort.”

Rigglesman and Kuhn explained that the goal of the center was to create an athletic space that serve as a local hub for youth athletics, host tournaments, provide space for both youth and adult fitness classes and act as a activity and wellness center for the community.

Kevin Hagerty, Grant County Commissioner

“Opportunities like this don’t come along every day, it is nice to have everybody wanting to be on the same page as far as the community goes, something where everyone can pitch in and everyone can see positivity grow in the community. And like I said before, the deterrent of negative activities I believe this will promote, is paramount.”

“I’d love to have two to three basketball courts in a row under the same roof,” Rigglesman said. “In the summertime this place is booming with baseball and travel ball tournaments. My dream would be for us to be able to hold basketball tournaments here in the wintertime. To get Petersburg on the map, in that sense.”

Rigglesman also said the center could host other youth tournaments and expand the activities locally, including gymnastics and wrestling tournaments.

Hagerty agreed, saying the center would not only support local health and youth activity, but also help grow the local economy as outside teams visit.

The commission also clarified that the center will be a nonprofit community center and while it will strive to accommodate youth sports, it will be available to the entire community.

“I think this will help us grow as a city, get more active and build better teams,” Rigglesman said. “I do also want to address, I’ve heard a few people suggest there isn’t really anything for our youth to do here, and there is. But things are changing, in our generation it was big for libraries and things like that. But now, we are having a big influx of kids into sports but we can’t retain them.”

“We have wanted to see something like this for a long time and that is why we put this money aside initially,” said commissioner Scotty Miley. “My initial thought was the hope that the county and the hospital could combine and create a facility, a place for the community and a place for them to have things like physical therapy. But that hasn’t transpired, but this is something I, and I think the other commissioners as well, is something we have wanted to see happen for a while.”

The commission also thanked Rigglesman and Kuhn for their continued volunteer efforts to help make the center a possibility.

“Opportunities like this don’t come along every day, it is nice to have every body wanting to be on the same page as far as the community goes, something where everyone can pitch in and everyone can see positivity grow in the community,” Hagerty said. “And like I said before, the deterrent of negative activities I believe this will promote is paramount.”

Ultimately, the commission approved to allot $150,000 to the project, including the $136,700 earmarked community center from ARP funds, on the conditions that they submit a final business plan for the center, that all ordinances and regulations are followed and there is a 503c status achieved.

W99 Grant County Airport busy with Civil Air Patrol glider operations

By 2nd Lt. Diana Layton

Civil Air Patrol’s West Virginia Wing began their season of glider operations on the weekend of March 16 at Grant County Airport (W99) in Petersburg.

Glider operations occur there once a month, until November, hosting multiple states on the East Coast. March’s operations included the local Potomac Highlands Composite Squadron’s Lt. John Banks serving as ground boss and Cadet Technical Sergeant Madisyn Porter serving as assistant ground boss.

They helped teach and guide cadets from North Carolina Wing 111 and Martinsburg, W.Va. achieve their glider orientation rides successfully.

In addition, multiple

plane and glider pilots from different towns in West Virginia traveled to help cadet flying dreams come true.

Civil Air Patrol’s glider program began in the 1960s but was mainly focused in the western part of the United States for a few years.

The primary purpose of CAP’s glider program is to give as many cadets as possible the opportunity to experience gliding and soaring through orientation flights.

Some goals of the glider program include maintaining a strong and effective ground and air safety program and promoting current, proficient, and professional airmanship.

Around 1998, the glider program experienced explosive growth in planting the seed of aviation and aerospace education in the lives of young people.

When glider flight academies became more and more popular, the U.S. Air Force helped purchase and acquire nearly 60 gliders.

The program became a success and maximized the utilization and opportunity for increased cadet participation in flight training and orientation flights.

To find out more information about Civil Air Patrol, join them at the Grant County Airport Thursday evenings at 6:30 pm or visit www.gocivilpatrol.com.

Heartbeat

By Noel Shreve, PES

An elderly woman lays sick in the hospital. Her daughter is coming to see her but is running late. As the nurses check on the elderly lady, she asks, “Has my daughter come yet?” The nurses told the elderly woman her daughter has not checked in yet but surely would soon.

Losing her breath, she pressed the help button. Nurses rushed in and placed an oxygen mask on her; it didn’t help. The old woman started to go pale; she knew she was dying. She just wanted to see her daughter one last time. Then her heartbeat started to slow down.

11... She started seeing memories of when she was tiny. She was playing a game with her siblings; it seemed like hide-and-seek. She was counting, waiting to catch her siblings, she used to be so energetic.

10... She was in front of her elementary school. It was her first day, and she was nervous. Then, two other kids came to greet her and show her around. These would be her future bandmates.

9... She met up at the old gym to see her friends. They were all going to practice for their next “concert” at the arts center. She was going to sing. She never knew this upcoming concert would change her life.

8... She was in a stadium this time. The band had risen in fame. She had sold out all the seats. She was so excited, not knowing her downfall would soon await her.

7... She started to date this “cool” boy and thought it was going to last forever. That is how love works, right? She was around 21 when she got her heartbroken by him. She shrugged it off and continued her musical career. She didn’t know this boy was the reason she would have to end her singing career.

6... While she was at one of her top selling concerts signing autographs, the same boy came, and right as she noticed him he said, “You cheated on me for your stupid career!” Before she could say anything, everyone went silent and started to leave the audience. Her friends wouldn’t listen and kicked her out.

5... She fell in love with somebody named Damien. This relationship basically lasted the rest of her life. They bought a home and decided to have a baby girl. They named her Lily. They were happy and never wanted anything else but each other.

4... Their daughter, Lily, was almost done with primary school; they could not believe how fast she was growing up! Lily wanted to be a doctor and go to medical school. She was hopeful for her child.

3... Her daughter had just finished medical school, and the woman was at her graduation. The woman was now considered “old”. Her hair was gray, and wrinkles started to show. She wondered how her life just flew by in the blink of an eye. Her husband was diagnosed with cancer and was in the hospital. He was going to get surgery with a high chance of failing. Damien was willing to take that risk.

2... The surgery failed, and the woman was devastated. She was not sure what to do with herself now. She was getting sick and was too frail to drive. She called her daughter to drive her to the hospital. Lily was in the middle of an operation but came to get her mom afterwards. The woman had heart disease. The woman knew she didn’t have much time left and accepted the fact she would have to stay in the hospital. There was one thing she could look forward to. Her daughter had a baby girl, and she would get to see it in a week.

1... The elderly woman looked around her hospital room; there were still no signs of her daughter. Today was the day, but she was never going to see her grandbaby. She looked up at the doctor, and said with a quiet voice, “Tell my daughter I will be watching over her and her baby when I pass. Thank you for watching over me, doctor.”

The doctor gave the elderly woman a smile as she drifted off to a forever sleep. Lily and the baby then piled into the room, and said, “Sorry I am late, but little Maria is here! I named her after you.” The young woman walked over to her mother’s lifeless body and gasped. She held her baby tightly and broke down into tears. “Please hold my baby, nurse.” asked Lily. Lily walked over to her mother and said, “I know you will be watching over me and my baby. I hope that the afterlife serves you well.” Then, Lily grabbed Maria and went out of the room, crying one last dreaded tear.

In response to questions regarding the recent national news regarding the lawsuit that was just won by the plaintiffs against the National Association of Realtors..... we first want to say that we are pleased to inform everyone that we ARE NOT, nor have we ever been a part of that organization. We believed there was no need to be obligated to keep paying the NAR so we could act like we had higher standards than others. We already adhere to the highest standards in answering to and honoring God in whom we trust.

Some thought that this lawsuit brought about new laws. The WV Real Estate Commission is the authority on laws governing real estate in WV and other states have their own Commissions. These lawsuits had nothing to do with the laws of each state but were against the NAR practices.

In order to do what is best for our clients, we will continue to offer compensation to other brokerages who bring buyers or referrals. We truly care about those who've decided to sell and those who are wanting to buy and we strive to make what can be an overwhelming process into an easier, orderly, joyous time of expectancy!

THE PROMISE OF EASTER

It is no coincidence that the celebration of Easter takes place each year in early spring, commemorating the resurrection of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. For Easter is a celebration of rebirth, and what better time to celebrate this than when the earth is springing back into life.

The new life of spring reminds us that this world is eternally productive and creative. The apparent lifelessness of winter is only an illusion. Sleeping just beneath the surface, is life and more life, awaiting God’s gentle touch to reawaken it.

In the same way, Easter reminds us that the death of our bodies is an illusion. Beneath it is life and more life. The Bible tells us that God so loved the world the He gave us His one and only Son, that whoever believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life. We will one day shed our bodies, as the trees shed their leaves and we will be reborn into life everlasting.

And I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish neither shall anyone snatch them out of My hand.

New K.J.V. John 10:28.

A Scratchy Bark?

DEAR PAWS: My little dog Barnsey is quite a barker for a terrier, but for the past several days his bark has been very hoarse. He sometimes snorts or sneezes, too.

I make sure he has plenty of water, but I'm not sure what else to do. It doesn't seem to be getting better. -- Faye H. Hartford, Connecticut

DEAR FAYE: This is a perfect time to take Barnsey to the vet. Chronic hoarseness when barking can have several different causes, and the veterinarian can better evaluate him to see what's happening.

I'll go over some of the reasons for a barker suddenly getting hoarse. Laryngitis is a common diagnosis, but it's important to figure out the cause.

A bacterial or viral infection may be the culprit, or gastroesophageal reflux (where stomach acid flows up into the esophageal tract, causing irritation and inflammation).

Less common causes are masses or tumors growing on or near the dog's larynx, or other conditions affecting the larynx. These may require surgery, and the vet will discuss this option with you.

The vet will evaluate Barnsey to see if he has an infection, acid reflux, or if the hoarse barking has another cause. They'll then be able to recommend an effective treatment.

For example, a bacterial infection would likely be treated with antibiotics. A viral infection has to run its course, but Barnsey would be treated with medications to make him comfortable and reduce inflammation.

If acid reflux is the suspected culprit, the vet may recommend changes to his feeding schedule and the amount of food at each meal. You can also try different varieties of dog food.

GO FIGURE!

Even Exchange

by Donna Pettman

Each numbered row contains two clues and two 6-letter answers. The two answers differ from each other by only one letter, which has already been inserted. For example, if you exchange the A from MASTER for an I, you get MISTER. Do not change the order of the letters.
